The Herald's special says: Telegraphic advices from McClellan's army this morning state everything remains quiet at the ford near Shepardstown. The forces on either side of the river are cautiously watching each other. The rebels keep their men out of sight, but occasionally a soldier horseman makes his appearance on the opposite bluff, and after a brief observation disappears. A special to the Times says:

Leesburg and vicinity are in possession of our forces, commanded by a fighting General.

A special to the Tribune says: The division of Stahl, late Schenck's, of Sigel's corps, has been ordered to Centreville, to occupy tout place. Gen. Hooker is confident that Le will be able to take the field within two weeks. His wound Hoblitzell of Alex McCook's staff and Lieuten has ceased to be painful, and has every favorable symptom. The President and several of the Cabinet have called upon him, and consulted with regard to the conduct of the war. McClellan in a letter thanks him for his brilhant services at the battle of Antietam, and expresses regret for the wound, and says: "I know had you not been struck you wou'd have gained the main road. That main road was the only one upon which the enemy could retreat, the one upon which he finally did retreat, and had it been gained he would have been intercepted." It is Hooker's opinion that the enemy have never been over 80,000 strong in Maryland, not even when reinforced by Jackson with 30,000 after that General had taken Harper's Ferry. Residents near the ford over the Potomac at which the rebels crossed say that 300 or 400 of them got out of their depth and were drowned. The ford is a narrow one and the descent on each loads of provisions.

It is thought the rebels are lying in wait in the hope that a portion of our lorces may be in duced to cross and fail into the ambush. A reconnoissance sent out by Banks towards Blue Radge returned to night. The party consisted of the 2d Pennsylvania cavalry, under Col. R. Butler Price. They proceeded as far as Ash dee and Ashby's Gap, a distance of fifty miles, meeting the pickets of the 6th Virginia cavalry They drove them in and pushed on to Ashby's Gap, where they met the regiment and dispersed killed. The inhabitants were fleeing to St. it, capturing a few prisoners, among whom was Lieut. Col. Green, of the 6th Virginia, badly

The rebels got wind of the approach of our troops on Sunday, and moved rapidly off a train of nearly 900 wagons, the capture of which was one of the objects of the expedition. The reconnoissance was a brilliant one. further details were received.

BALTIMORE, Sept. 22 .- The correspondent of the American at Sharpsburg under date of the 22d says:

There has come a lull in which the contending armies are lying quietly with the Potomac be tween them awaiting developments. Since the reconnoissance across the Potomac at Clarksburg on Saturday last, perfect quiet has reigned along the lines scarcely disturbed even by the skirmishing of pickets. We hold the river at Sharpsburg in strong force while the rebels occupy the opposite bank but not, it is thought, in force. We also occupy Williamsport in sufficient strength to resist any attempt of the rebels to dislodge us. Harper's Ferry is like. | dull wise in our possession, and we thus stand in a position to check a recrossing to this State and to recommence offensive. The army is not idle. Large columns are in motion to-day. A regiment of cavalry crossed the river last night about three miles from Sharpsburg on a
